50th ANNIVERSARY EDITION

Introduction

This Sickle is the 50th Brandon yearbook in as many years. In 1927 the Sickle emerged from the Brandon College publications office with a mandate to chronicle the events and thus provide a sentimental record of the entire academic year.

In each of those years attempts have been made to do just that, with varying degrees of success. However, the idea of interpreting your experiences, thoughts and feelings of the time we've lingered here is not very plausible, nor very much to my liking.

So, many white spaces have been provided around the multitude of photographs and drawings that have been gathered by your hard-working and very small yearbook staff. In these spaces we hope you will put the important memories and significant happenings of your times here.

One picture is worth a thousand words.

Thank You,
The Sickle staff— editor
Curt Shultz

Ideas are clear. They soar in the serene supernal. I can take them out and look at them, they fit in books, they lead me down that narrow way. And in the morning they are there.

Ideas are straight. But the world is round, and a messy mortal is my friend!

The Ascent of Perkins Peak

In the midnight hours of April Fool's Day, a three-man team launched an assault against the treacherous south face of Perkin's Peak. The team, comprised of B. U. students Brian Keating, Dan Chapman and Murray Parsons, armed themselves with climbing gear and a real-life version of the Canadian colors to stage the conquest.

However, set back by the inadequacies of improvised equipment, the team could only push it as high as half-mast.

Returning some weeks later, Brian Keating was able to raise the flag to the full height of the mast and safely descend again.
